

Build Fluency and Comprehension

Engage students with fluency-building scripts.

- Build Knowledge: Scripts aligns to science, social studies, and ELA themes to build knowledge and language in context.
- Build Fluency: Scripts model specific and different elements of fluency.
- Build Confidence: 5-day lessons encourage repeated oral practice as students prepare for the performance.

“Reader's Theater is an authentic, entertaining, and educationally powerful way to read and communicate meaning. Reader's Theater yields improvements in students' word recognition, fluency, and comprehension.”

—Tim Rasinski, Fluency Expert

Worker 1: The train!

Worker 2: I see the train.

Dinah the Train: Toot toot!

Worker 3: I hear the train.

Dinah: Toot toot!

Captain: I can hear the whistle blowing. The train is coming into the station.

I've Been Working on the Railroad, Grade 1

Narrator 1: There is a lot to think about and very little time. Revere realizes he needs to set a fast pace. Grabbing the reins, he stretches his spurs to the north. Bells and gongs ring the night.

Revere: (yelling) The Regulars are out! Take care! The Regulars are out!

Narrator 2: When the Minutemen hear the alarm, they grab their muskets and gun powder. Women take their children and hide.

Revere: (yelling) The Regulars are on the move! They're armed and heading toward Concord!

Narrator 3: Wind spreads quickly through Middlesex, the area surrounding Boston. At one point, Revere sees two British soldiers coming toward him. Once again, he stretches his spurs to the sides of his horse.

Revere: Come on, beauty! I can see their bullets! Let's show them that a British charger is no match for a fine Yankee horse! Faster!

Narrator 4: It is midnight by the time he arrives at the home where Samuel Adams and John Hancock are staying.

Revere: The Regulars are out! Sound the alarm! Beat the drums! Ring the bells!

Minutemen: What's all that yelling? What's the problem? Who goes there?

Revere: It's Paul Revere. I have to speak to Sam and John.
